

We have shown that saturation has a strong effect on thresholds for step index fibers. Other, more complex refractive index profiles might be designed to raise the instability threshold by changing the shapes of the interacting modes. However, saturation can be expected to have a strong influence in those as well.